About the Technology in Government & the Public Sector Canberra Summit 2007

Information and Communications Technology (ICT) including e-government to services technology is evolving at a rapid pace across all sectors of the public sector. For government and the public sector, ICT provides tremendous opportunities to deliver services more efficiently. Today more than ever government and public sector agencies need to ensure a more comprehensive service to its citizens.

Governments are now confirming that they are looking at ways at leveraging on partnerships that will bring about synergy and long term sustainable programs. Thus e-citizen programs will bridge the digital divide and create an information society and Knowledge Government (Knowledge Government).

Streamlining current processes will not deliver an end – to –end solution for eservices. What is needed is a seamless IT backbone for a fast reliable and efficient connectivity, data storage, access and privacy across ALL agencies.
